1. STATEMENT OF INTENT

1.1. The WFADS Breaking Rules (hereinafter – the “Rules”) apply to Breaking competitions held under the auspices of the World Federation of Acrobatic Dances and Dance Sports (WFADS) and included into the WFADS Calendar of Events, such as:

- World Championships.
- Continental Championships.
- World Cups.
- Continental Cups.
- World Youth Championships.
- Continental Youth Championships.
- World Junior Championships.
- Continental Junior Championships.
- World Juvenile Championships.
- Continental Juvenile Championships.
- WFADS Global Tournament.
- WFADS Continental Tournament.
- International competitions.

1.2. All organizers, Head Judges, Supervisors, Judges, judging system scrutineers, athletes, Coaches, Team representatives, Masters of Ceremony (MC), DJs of Breaking competitions held under the WFADS auspices shall abide by the Rules.

2. INTRODUCTION

The WFADS is the international sports federation ensuring international development of breaking worldwide.

These Rules are established to standardize competition formats and judging criteria for all official WFADS events, promoting fairness, transparency, and the continued growth of the sport.

The philosophy of these Rules is to honor the rich cultural heritage of breaking while framing it as a modern competitive sport. The competition format is designed to evaluate athletes based on objective criteria that reflect the core pillars of the dance: creativity, style, technique, performativity, and musicality.

Breaking promotes values of respect, peace, and unity, which are fundamental to all interactions within the community.

2.1. History of breaking

Breaking is an athletic style of street dance that originated in the Bronx (New York City, USA) in the 1970s, becoming one of the pillars of hip-hop culture. Throughout its development, breaking has evolved from a street art form into a global cultural phenomenon and a recognized sport.

In December 2016, breaking was included in the program of the 3rd Summer Youth Olympic Games in 2018 in Buenos Aires (Argentina), where it debuted as an official sport, showcasing its spectacular nature and competitive spirit to an international audience. This event was pivotal in the decision to include breaking in the program of the 2024 Paris Olympic Games.

In December 2020, the International Olympic Committee (IOC) ratified the inclusion of breaking in the program of the Games of the XXXIII Olympiad Paris 2024.

In 2024, breaking was successfully held at the Games of the XXXIII Olympiad Paris 2024. The tournament was highly praised by the sports community, participants, guests of the Games, and viewers worldwide.

2.2. Elements of breaking

Breaking consists of four main foundational elements: toprock, footwork, power moves, and freezes.

2.2.1. Toprock

Toprock is one of the fundamental elements of breaking, involving rhythmic movements performed to the beat of the music, consisting of various steps, turns, and rotations while standing. It is most commonly used at the beginning of a performance. This is the time when breakers can feel the rhythm of the music and prepare to transition to the floor.

It should be noted that this element is not limited to foot movements. An important part of toprock is the use of arms, gestures, and poses, which can add expressiveness to the dance.

A key aspect of toprock is the breaker's ability to showcase their individuality and originality. This is achieved through variations of basic steps (Indian Step, Crossover Step), their modification, and the creation of unique elements that characterize a particular breaker's style.

Toprock allows breakers to express themselves, interact with the music, and engage the audience with their unique movements and style. This element emphasizes the creative aspect of breaking and contributes to the diversity of performances.

2.2.2. Footwork

Footwork involves moving the feet around body with support on the hands, performed from a squatting position.

The primary movements are executed with the feet, but the arms also play a significant role and are often used not only for support and balance but can also become an integral part of the movement itself.

The foundation of footwork consists of various steps, slides, rotations, and turns in different directions.

As with other breaking elements, creating one's own unique moves is crucial in footwork. Breakers strive to have a recognizable and original style. This is achieved by developing their own steps, movements, and combinations, which gives breakers individuality and a unique style.

Footwork is closely tied to musical rhythm. The ability to feel the beat and accents in the music plays a vital role in the successful execution of footwork.

2.2.3. Power Moves

Power moves are an element of breaking that is based on dynamic rotations and jumps. These elements require serious physical training and are characterized by high energy consumption. They can be divided into two main categories: ground movements and air movements, each with its own unique features.

Ground Moves include rotations in which the breakers touch the floor with their back, shoulder blades, shoulders.

Air Moves are rotations in which the breakers touch the floor only with their hands, rising above the surface, while the rest of the body is in the air.

This requires a high degree of coordination and control over the body. Breakers can vary the rotations and jumps by using different transitions between them, creating unique combinations.

2.2.4. Freezes

Freezes in breaking involve holding a static position in a specific pose, adding expressiveness and uniqueness to the dance. These freezes can be performed on various body parts, and their distinctive feature is not only the static hold of the pose but also the creation of an original shape.

Freezes are typically used at the end of dance sequences or to highlight specific accents in the music. They are often combined with other breaking elements, such as footwork or power moves, creating diverse combinations and giving the performance a more dynamic look.

Due to the static nature of freezes and the need to hold specific poses, their execution requires high coordination and control from the breakers.

3. MAIN TERMS

B-boy / B-girl / Breaker: An athlete participating in breaking, competing either individually or as part of a duo, crew.

Battle: A competition format where the participants act as opponents (athlete vs. athlete, duo vs. duo, crew vs. crew).

- They ensure all devices (tablets, smartphones) are charged, connected to the network, and synchronized.
- They fix any technical issues that the judges may encounter during the battle.

Decision-making process

- Scrutineers monitor that judges submit their scores on time and in accordance with the regulations.

- They do not influence the judges' decisions (who won), but they oversee the process of making those decisions.

- After each round or battle, scrutineers analyze the voting statistics.

- They check if a technical error was made.

Reporting

- After the event, they can provide a report to the Head judge and Supervisor on the work of the judging panel.

6. COMPETITION FORMAT

Depending on the number of registered participants (athletes, duos or crews), the competition is divided into the following rounds:

- Qualifying round – any number of registered athletes, duos or crews.

- Knock-out format / Round Robin format – 1/64, 1/32, 1/16, 1/8, 1/4 (Quarter-finals), 1/2 (Semi-finals), Small final, Final – head-to-head battle rounds.

Depending on the number of registered athletes, duos or crews in each category, the number of rounds may be reduced. The number of rounds is determined by the competition regulations.

6.1. Qualifying Round “Breaking Solo”

The purpose of this round is to select the best athletes who will advance to the next round. The number of athletes advancing depends on the total number of registered breakers and is determined by the competition regulations. It may be 128, 64, 32, 16, 8, 4, or 2 athletes.

The qualifying round is conducted as follows: breakers are called onto the dance floor in groups of 2 (facing each other), 3 (positioned at the three corners) or 4 (positioned at the four corners). Each participant performs a set of approximately 40 seconds \pm 5 seconds, after which the next 2, 3 or 4 breakers are called.

If multiple athletes have the same total score, they will be ranked in random order, but if the round ranking results in a tie for the last qualifying positions, the tied athletes must participate in an additional qualifying round to determine the final list of participants.

The qualifying round can be held in two stages. The number of athletes advancing from the first and second stages of the qualification is determined by the competition regulations.

6.2. Qualifying round “Breaking Duos”, “Breaking Mixed Duos”, “Breaking Crews”, “Breaking Division Crews”

The purpose of the round is to select the best duos/crews that will advance to the next round of the competition. The number of duos/crews that qualify (64, 32, 16, 8, 4 or 2) is determined by the competition regulations.

The qualification is conducted in a battle format. Duos/crews are called onto the dance floor and positioned opposite each other. Duos/crews members take turns performing their sets (a participant from one duo/crew performs a set, which is answered by a participant from the opposing duo/crew).

In this round, duos/crews are allowed to perform no more than one routine. The number of rounds is determined by the competition regulations.

Following the qualifying round, the 64, 32, 16, 8, 4, or 2 duos/crews with the highest total scores are determined.

If multiple duos/crews have the same total score, they will be ranked in random order, but if the round ranking results in a tie for the last qualifying positions, the tied duos/crews must participate in an additional qualifying round to determine the final list of participants.

6.3. Knock-out format / Round Robin format “Breaking Solo”

Knock-out format of 1/64, 1/32, 1/16, 1/8, 1/4 (Quarter-finals), 1/2 (Semi-finals), Small final, Final is conducted in a head-to-head battle round. Knock-out format 1/16, 1/8 may be conducted in a head-to-head battle round or Round Robin format.

The format of the battle stages is determined by the competition regulations.

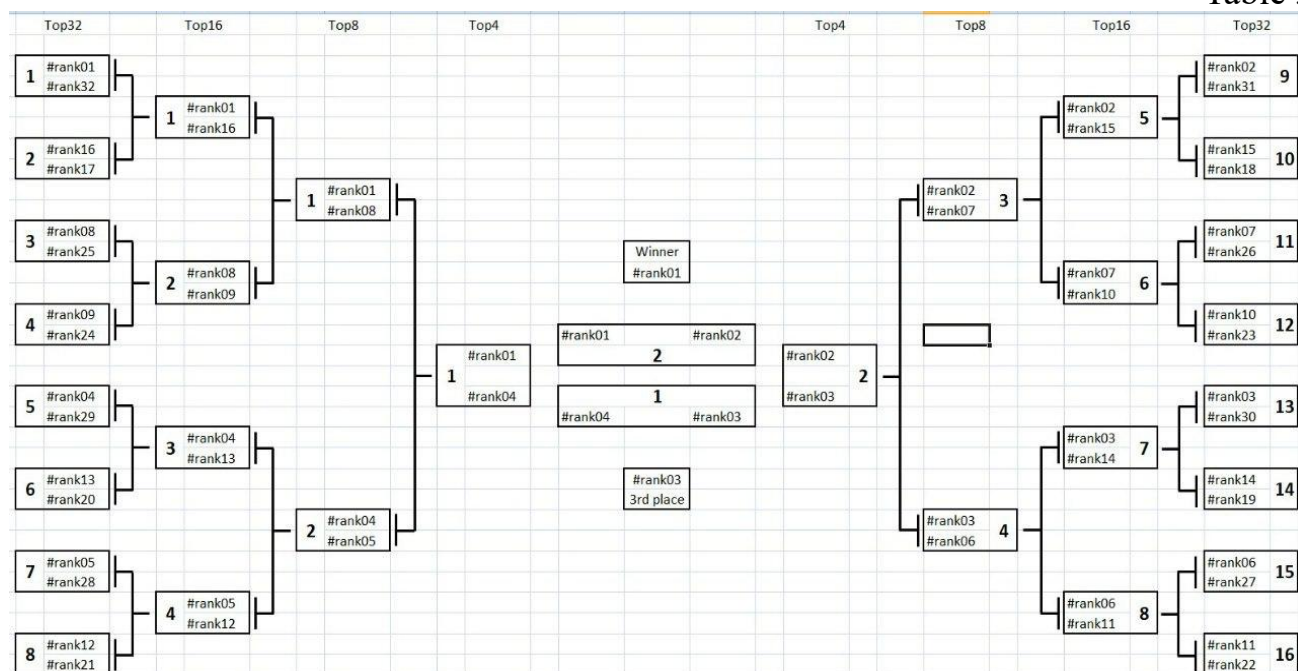

6.3.1. Knock-out format

Knock-out format of 1/64, 1/32, 1/16, 1/8, 1/4 (Quarter-finals), 1/2 (Semi-finals) are conducted to identify the best athletes who will advance to the next round. The round is held in a battle format and consists of rounds, the number of which is determined by the competition regulations. In each round, athletes perform 2 sets of approximately 40 seconds \pm 5 seconds each. If the dancers have won an equal number of rounds, a tie-break is held between them.

The athletes who win the semifinal battle advances to the final. The athletes who lose the semifinal battle participate in the small final.

Knockout format:

6.3.2. Round Robin format

1/16, 1/8 are conducted in a head-to-head (1 vs. 1) battle rounds, where everyone competes against everyone in groups of 4 people (Table 4). The battles within the groups consist of two rounds, and the winner is determined by the number of rounds won.

In case of a tie in the number of rounds won, the number of judges' votes is taken into account. If two breakers from the group that advanced to the next round, have won an equal number of rounds and received an equal number of judges' votes, an additional battle is held.

In each round, the athletes perform 2 sets of approximately 40±5 seconds each.

6.4. Knock-out format “Breaking Duos”, “Breaking Mixed Duos”, “Breaking Crews”, “Breaking Division Crews”

1/64, 1/32, 1/16, 1/8, 1/4 (Quarter-finals), 1/2 (Semi-finals) are conducted to identify the best duos/crews that will advance to the next round. The number of rounds and routines is determined by the competition regulations.

In each round, the breakers from the duos/crews take turns performing 1 set (which may include a routine) with a maximum duration of 1 minute and 20±10 seconds each. The order of performance for the duos/crews' members is not regulated and is determined by the duo/crew itself.

If the duos/crews have won an equal number of rounds, a tie-break is held between them.

The duos/crews who wins the semifinal battle advances to the final. The duos/crews who lose the semifinal battle participate in the small final.

6.5. Small Final

The purpose of this round is to determine the athletes, duos or crews who will take 3rd and 4th place in the competition.

6.5.1. “Breaking Solo”

The round is conducted in a 1-on-1 battle format, consisting of a number of rounds determined by the competition regulations. In each round, athletes perform 2 sets of approximately 40 ± 5 seconds each. If the breakers have won an equal number of rounds, a tie-break is held between them.

6.5.2. “Breaking Duos”, “Breaking Mixed Duos”, “Breaking Crews”, “Breaking Division Crews”

The round is conducted in a battle format and consists of a number of rounds that specified by the competition regulations. In each round, the breakers from the duos/crews take turns performing 1 set (which may include a routine) with a maximum duration of 1 minute and 20 ± 10 seconds. The duos/crews determine the order of performance at its own discretion, and the number of routines is determined by the competition regulations.

If the duos/crews have won an equal number of rounds, a tie-break is held between them. The tie-break is held in a 1-on-1 battle format and consists of 1 round without routines. Each duo/crew chooses 1 breaker for the tie-break.

During each battle, the athletes strive to perform for an equal amount of time, and all rounds within the battle are interconnected. No penalty is imposed for exceeding the time limit during the competition.

6.6. Final Round

The purpose of this round is to determine the athlete, duo or crew who will take 1st and 2nd place in the competition.

6.6.1. “Breaking Solo”

The round is conducted in a 1-on-1 battle format, consisting of a number of rounds determined by the competition regulations. In each round, athletes perform 2 sets of approximately 40 ± 5 seconds each. If the breakers have won an equal number of rounds, a tie-break is held between them.

6.6.2. “Breaking Duos”, “Breaking Mixed Duos”, “Breaking Crews”, “Breaking Division Crews”

The round is conducted in a battle format and consists of a number of rounds that specified by the competition regulations. In each round, the breakers from the duos/crews take turns performing 1 set (which may include a routine) with a maximum duration of 1 minute and 20 ± 10 seconds. The duos/crews determine the order of performance at its own discretion, and the number of routines is determined by the competition regulations.

If the duos/crews have won an equal number of rounds, a tie-break is held between them. The tie-break is held in a 1-on-1 battle format and consists of 1 round without routines. Each duo/crew chooses 1 breaker for the tie-break.

During each battle, the athletes strive to perform for an equal amount of time, and all rounds within the battle are interconnected. No penalty is imposed for exceeding the time limit during the competition.

7. JUDGING SYSTEM

The judging system in breaking is a structured digital process designed to ensure maximum objectivity, transparency, and impartiality. It is divided into two main formats: qualification and battles. During official WFADS competitions, various judging systems approved by WFADS and meeting certain general requirements may be used.

7.1. Qualifying Round

In this format each breaker, duo or crew performs their own sets, and then the judges evaluate the performance level of each participant or crew. 10-point or 100-point scale system is used. The judges watch the performance and assign a total score that reflects their overall impression of the performance level.

As a result, participants are ranked based on their scores, and the top performers advance to the next stage – the battles.

7.2. Battles

In the battles, two breakers, two duos or two crews compete with each other, taking turns performing their sets. The winner of each battle is determined by comparative evaluation. After each round (after both participants have completed their sets), the judges select the winner based on predefined criteria. This process is repeated for each round. At the end of each round, the system counts the votes and announces the winner of the battle.

7.3. Judging Criteria

Different systems may use varying numbers of criteria. Additional criteria may be applied.

The judging systems usually uses at least three key criteria. These are displayed on the judges' device screens and serve as a guideline for evaluation.

The main criteria:

- Technique: Purity, complexity, form and control of movement execution. Strength, balance, coordination, flexibility, and execution.
- Musicality: The dancer's ability to hear, interpret, and express the music through dance. Rhythm, accents, textural layers, and emotional expression of the music.
- Originality: Uniqueness of style, improvisational skills, creativity in creating new combinations and movements, charisma, confidence, and presentation.

7.4. Technical Support

- Devices: Judges use tablets or smartphones with pre-installed specialized judging applications.

- Interface:

For qualifying: The screen displays a fader with a digital scale (0–100 or 0–10), which the judge moves to assign a score, or a field where the judge can enter a score. For battles: Criteria are displayed as scales or buttons, allowing judges to assign advantage in specific criteria to one of the competing breakers. All votes and scores are transmitted in real time to a central server (operator's computer), which immediately aggregates the data, displays the results on screens for the audience, and saves all statistics for subsequent analysis.

7.5. Deductions by Judges:

7.5.1. Falls

A mistake that reduces the quality of the executed element, resulting in signs of loss of physical control. It may lead to a clear interruption of the movement being performed.

7.5.2. Misbehavior

Athletes must refrain from clearly obscene, vulgar, racist, offensive, degrading, sexual, or violent gestures and actions. A third violation of this type results in disqualification. The judges must determine whether the misbehavior warrants disqualification, and all disqualification decisions are made by the Head Judge only upon a final majority vote of the judges.

7.5.3. Physical contact

Minor violation: Intentional, non-accidental physical contact. Repeated violations of this type may be considered a serious violation. Serious violation: Intentional, non-accidental, aggressive physical contact. Results in disqualification. The Head Judge must determine whether the behavior warrants disqualification, and all disqualification decisions are made by the Head Judge.

7.5.4. Repeat

Judges must evaluate the ability of participants to demonstrate a diverse range of movements throughout the competition.
